WELCOME TO THE ONTARIO MULTIFAITH COUNCIL ON SPIRITUAL AND RELIGIOUS CARE.

The pages which follow were prepared to help you understand the Council's purpose, explain its goals and provide an understanding of its work. We hope that this information will make clear the Council's place in society and your place within the Ontario Multifaith Council community.

The Ontario Multifaith Council has its roots in the field of institutional chaplaincy, chiefly in the areas of correctional institutions, health and long-term care facilities. In the 1970s, when the changing face of the Ontario population demanded innovative responses to the diversity of people and faiths, the Government of Ontario brought together faith group representatives to provide advice and assistance to the government with regard to the delivery of adequate and appropriate spiritual and religious care to the people in the care of the province. The result was the formation of the Ontario Multifaith Council on Spiritual & Religious Care, whose role is as the faith group advisory body to the Provincial government. The Council was mandated to assist in policy development, training and professional education and to assist with the development of standards of adequate and appropriate religious and spiritual care.

Today, working under a Memorandum of Agreement with the provincial government, the Ontario Multifaith Council provides the ministries of Community & Social Services, Health & Long-Term Care, Children and Youth Services and Community Safety and Correctional Services with authoritative advice from the faith groups. Hundreds of volunteers who comprise the Council's thirteen Regional Multifaith Committees offer support and education to spiritual care providers across Ontario. These same volunteers serve on Screening Committees to approve spiritual care providers for work in a Multifaith environment.

The Multifaith Information Services program provides resources, information and advice to those working in the front lines of spiritual and religious care – chaplains, volunteers and community faith group leaders – and increasingly to medical staff, educators, policy makers, institutional managers and government workers.

The Council publishes a variety of materials, including the Multifaith Information Manual which provides authoritative information regarding the protocols for care of persons from many faiths as well as occasional papers and reports on a variety of related subjects.

In the following pages, you will discover many of the functions, objectives and structures that support the activities of the Ontario Multifaith Council. We welcome your questions and comments.

MULTIFAITH SCREENING

The Ontario Multifaith Council on Spiritual and Religious Care (OMC) has the responsibility to ensure that candidates for positions as Spiritual and Religious Care Providers (Chaplains) in government funded institutions and transfer payment agencies, have sufficient knowledge and experience to provide and coordinate spiritual care and religious services in a multifaith setting. A screening process has been developed to enable candidates to demonstrate their knowledge of multifaith issues and their ability and experience in working with persons from diverse faith backgrounds.

Regional Multifaith Committee have members and other faith group representatives who are experienced Spiritual Care and Religious services providers who conduct screening interviews at various times throughout the province. Using a standard format, the Screening Committee seeks to determine the candidate's competence for work in a multifaith environment. The Committee takes notes during the interview and after consultation informs the candidate of its decision. Successful candidates receive a letter and certificate, valid for five years, attesting to their competence. Candidates who are not successful are given information about the areas they need to address. Unsuccessful candidates may appeal the Screening Committee's decision to the OMC and may be granted another interview. Documentation is confidential and is kept on file for five years. There is a processing fee, which must accompany the application for screening. Applications for Screening are available on the OMC website at www.omc.ca

MULTIFAITH INFORMATION SERVICES

Multifaith Information Services (MIS) is a program of the Ontario Multifaith Council whose aim is to provide information and resources that foster the development of a culture of knowledge and respect for the wide range of faith traditions in Ontario.

The Multifaith Library

The Multifaith Library is a lending and reference service for those requiring information on chaplaincy, faith accommodation, multiculturalism, spiritual and religious care, long-term and palliative care, world religions, restorative justice and corrections, cultural practices, and ecumenism. The library provides extensive research, reference and referral services within the bounds of its subject and operational guidelines.

Library services are available free of charge to those who oversee or deliver spiritual care and religious rights programs in the provinces institutions. There may be fees for some services, or fees for those whose requirements are not covered by OMC's agreement with the provincial government.

The library contains more than 3,700 books, 2,300 articles, 250 videos and 800 web sites which can be accessed through our on-line catalogue, by telephoning our library staff, or by visiting our library with an appointment. Donations of material are welcome, and subject to our collection policy; larger donations of goods, services, or funds can be acknowledged by a charitable receipt.

Through the maintenance and development of this resource collection, the Ontario Multifaith Council is able to fulfil many of its objectives and to assist the government of Ontario in its challenge to provide adequate and appropriate Spiritual Care and Religious Rights.

Publishing

The Multifaith Information Manual (5th edition, English and French version) is produced by the Ontario Multifaith Council.
